THE LEXINGTON ELECTION.

The campaign for the Commission Form of Government is on in full blast in Lexington. The last legislature passed an act allowing cities of the second class to vote on petition whether they would adopt the commission form or not. More than half the voters of Lexington asked by petition that the question be submitted in November. It looked at first as if everyone favored it and that it would carry easily.

But as time has passed the politicians have become alarmed and are now making strenuous efforts to defeat it. We are afraid they will be strong enough to do it this time, but of course, Lexington will finally adopt it.

The great cry of the opponents of the Commission Form is that it is undemocratic because it puts out of business a large number of officers. It does lessen the list of election officers but we cannot understand why that makes the measure any less democratic. In Lexington the voters elect the Mayor; in Winchester they do not. Is not one city government as democratic as the other?

The Commission Form cuts off much of the red tape. It gets away from the politicians. It concentrates power in a few and concentrates responsibility, also, so that the votes can tell what officer does or does not do his duty.

The Commission Form has given a better municipal government wherever it has been tried. We trust that the voters of Lexington will adopt it next November and show all other Kentucky cities the advantages.

PERRYGRAPHS.

Things are never just even. When it is good times for the producer it is hard times for the consumer.

It is only a short time until the country will be saved, one way or the other.

Those patriots who think that the defeat of the Roosevelt ticket in New York would be the political end of the Colonel do not know the man or anything about the principles that he stands for.

been away from railroad or telegraph communication. On our return we find that two of our friends are no more, Dr. Wash Miller, of this city, and Miss Annie Gnadinger, of Cynthiana. Dr. Miller was an independent thinker and a philosopher. Vigorous of mind, he always had opinions of his own, yet he was courteous and kind, a Kentucky gentleman. Miss Gnadinger was born in this city and we knew her from a child. She had just arrived at mature womanhood. Her character was noble and her thoughts were pure. We cannot make a preachment over the loss of these two friends. We don't know how. All we can say is that our sorrow is greater than we can express.

Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juices; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas, or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong.
Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

A Bird Sanctuary.

It is the custom during the summer months to leave the ventilating pipes open in the old church at Hamstead Ridgway, Staffordshire. A robin took advantage of this lately and built its nest in the wooden case of the organ behind the false pipes, where it did no harm to the instrument. It was sitting when discovered, and was allowed for this once to hatch and rear its brood, one solitary chick. A few leaves of an old prayer book formed part of the nest. The hen sat quite steadily during the service and took no notice of the organ. But the cock would not face the congregation, and only ventured to appear at the windows with food in his bill, but did not dare to come in. A thrush also built in a low laurel bush at the church door, where every one looked into it, but the boys all agreed it must not be touched, and the eggs hatched quite safely.—Field.

Give Us a Trial

Feeling a Part

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"I never did but one good act in my life," said the old counterfeiter. "There wasn't much credit in it to me, but it was productive of a lot of happiness to others. It occurred many years ago, and as I am now a very old man and have a very long, troubled life to look back upon, including several terms in the penitentiary, it stands out from the rest of my acts in odd contrast.

"It was in the summer of 1859 that several of us got together in a northern city and manufactured a number of twenty dollar counterfeit bills. As soon as we had finished the job we destroyed the outfit, divided the bills and started for different parts of the country to put them out on the public, my section being the south. Boarding one of the crack steamers of that day, I started for New Orleans. In order the better to impose on people I dressed myself in ministerial black and wore a white cravat. I had been an actor and could personate a clergyman, or any one else, for that matter, to perfection.

"The main cabin of the steamers running on the Mississippi river in those days, when the table was not set for meals, was occupied principally for gambling. Poker, seven-up, euchre and other games were played, though the parties playing were not large and often two persons only occupied a table.
I was sitting on the guards one day when a negro came out of the cabin, wringing his hands.

"What's the matter, boy? I asked.
"Mars' done gone lose me to a niggar trader. Ma wife an' pickaninies won't nebber see me no mo'."

"I found that his master, a planter, had taken him to Cairo as his body servant, was returning, had lost all the money he had with him at cards, staked his dinky and lost him too.
I went into the cabin, where the planter and the trader were setting up, the planter being at the moment occupied in making out a bill of sale for the slave.

"I beg your pardon, sir," I said to the planter. "On account of my vocation I am opposed, of course, to gambling in any form, but I dislike exceedingly the separation of families.
I understand that you have lost your negro. I would be pleased to lend you the money to win him back."

"The gentleman accepted the offer.
I brought out some new, crisp bills, just from the press, and the game started anew. It was euchre. I soon saw that the gambler could go on winning from the trader all day if he liked, for the former was perpetrating one of the commonest tricks on him—that is, 'turning jack.' In other words, when he dealt he would always turn up a knave for himself. Seeing this and other cheating, I interfered. I told him that I had learned the game before becoming a clergyman and insisted on taking the planter's place.
Since I was backing the latter he was obliged to yield to me in the matter, which he did with a bad grace.

"I had not only learned the game before becoming a clergyman, but all the tricks that went with it and many other games. I walked into that card sharper in a way that opened his eyes. The negro at stake had followed me into the cabin and was standing watching the game with bulging eyes.
It was hard for me to keep a straight face, playing as I was, a supposed minister of the gospel, with counterfeit money and doing as neat bits of thimbering as I had ever been practiced on that palatial steamboat. The negro trader was not a professional card sharper, though he didn't hesitate to cheat the planter, and never dreamed that the souther man before him in a spotless white necktie was placing the cards exactly where he wanted them.

"Of course I soon won the dinky for his master. Then I arose from the table, delivered a homily on the sin of gambling and returned to the guards.
I was followed by the planter, who said to me:
"Permit me, sub, to say to yo' that yo're the first man of the cloth that has ever obtained my unbounded respect, sub. Yo' have saved my boy, sub, from being separated from his wife and children, an act fo' which I would have been to blame. I have sufficient influence, sub, to control a call to the First Baptist church of —, Mississippi. If yo' will accept it it shall be yo's with a fat salary."

"I thanked the gentleman for his offer, but declined it. When we reached his landing he insisted so heartily upon my visiting him at his plantation that I consented.

"I was made welcome by his family, and the wife and children of the negro I had saved from the trader came to the house with tears in their eyes to thank me. I was a good looking young fellow in those days and could see that I made an impression on one of the planter's daughters. I had everything at my disposal to perpetrate any rascality I might choose. I could get the planter's indorsement, which would enable me to dispose of my 'green goods,' and I believed I could win his daughter.

"I did neither. For a brief season I enjoyed the sensation of being a fine fellow. During that time I perturbed myself to feel that just as an actor will feel the character he is personating. Then when it was over I departed, resisting with difficulty the re-proachful look of the girl who favored me, and as soon as I was on another boat was again a dog of a counterfeiter."

Emersonian Philosophy.
I find the gayest castles in the air that were ever piled far better for comfort and for use than the dungeons in the air that we daily dug and caverned out by grumbling, discontent people. A man should make life and nature happier to us, or he had better never been born.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.
